

see from the above example that merely looking at the specific power and total liquid production when evaluating plant performance can result in a distorted conclusion. The product splits must be examined when using specific power for performance comparison.

Cosmodyne has been building air separation plants since 1958 with over 400 plants installed worldwide. We offer the most efficient plants in the industry with guaranteed performance and quality. For further assistance or information please visit www.cosmodyne.com

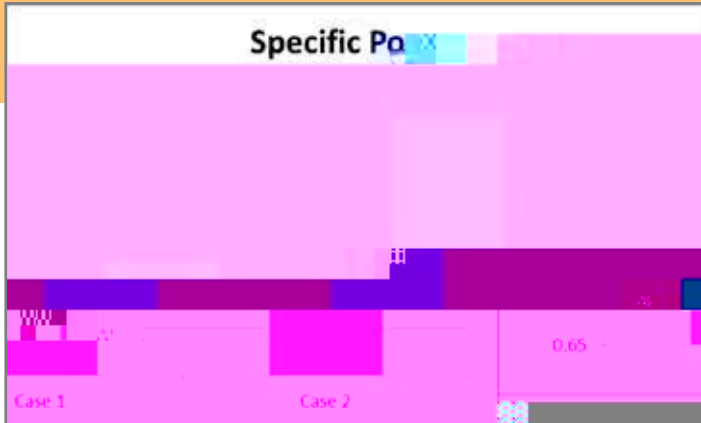

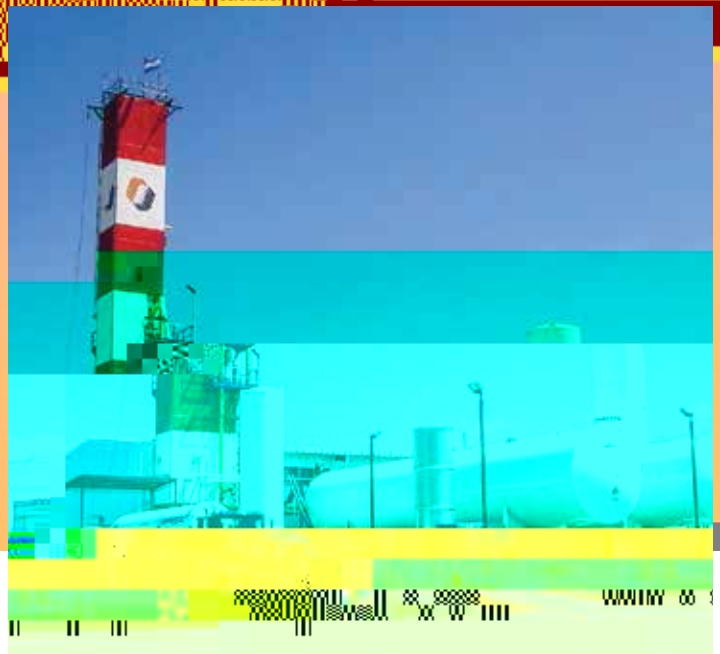

Figure 3 – Specific Power

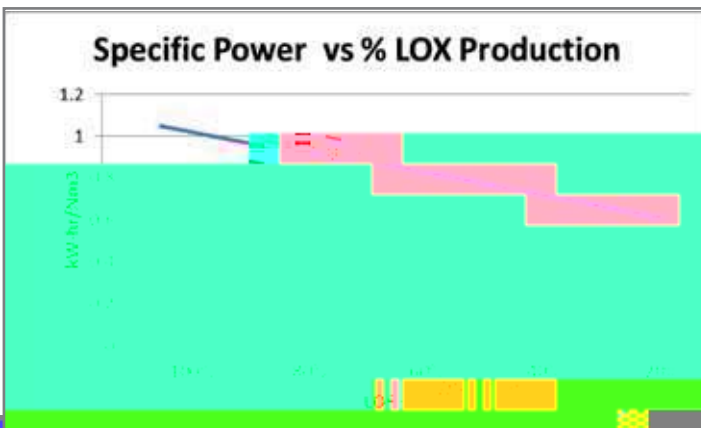

Figure 4 – Effects of LOX production split on Specific Power

